21 And, watch, He touched his thigh, and Jacob walked different. Amen. I hope that goes way down home. When you wrestle with God, you'll walk different after that. Watch.

A strong. . . On the other side of the brook, the little river, he was a strong, great man, backslidden though, away from God, running from his brother, running from God; but stout and sturdy.

And on the other side of the brook, a limping prince. . . "Thou art a prince before God, for you have power with God as a prince. " A limping prince, and he limped all of his life. How God does things. Isn't He marvelous?
